The Sydney Morning Denail.

When the vote of £17,000 in satisfaction of the arbitrators' award in the Milburn Creek case was under debate in the Legislative Council, Sir JOHN ROBERTSON said that " if the Government had not taken the course they adopted in sending the claim to arbitration, and in making the award final, those people would probably have recovered £100,000 against the Government." When the l'yrmont land claims were under discussion in the Assembly in November last, Mr. LACKEY said, "I do not think for one moment that those claims are likely to be endorsed either by the Government or by the officers of the Government, or by the Supreme Court, which must eventually decide the question. I have no doubt that, instead of £750,000 or £760,000, we shall be able to obtain the whole of the land for between £250,000 and £300,000." Sir John Roberton had little or no confidence in juries of his countrymen, as competent of trustworthy in questions of compensation be-tween private claimants and the State. Mr. LACKEY had much. No elaborate comparison of the facts in the two cases is nece clow which of the two Ministers took the more accurate view of the matter. The results of the two conflicting pol public, and no one except the claimants and their friends would now deny that in the light of these experiments, at any rate, the interests of the public are safer in the hands of a jury than in the hands of arbitrators. The lesson clearly is that if claims against the public are to be thoroughly sifted, and all the public are to be thoroughly sifted, and all the evidence bearing upon them is to be produced, and justice to the public is to be done, the investigation should take place in an open court, under the presiding eversight of a trained and competent Judge, and before a regularly constituted jury. When the inquiry is made before arbitrators, sitting with closed doors, there is no sufficient evarantee that these conditions shall be falguarantee that these conditions shall be fulilled. In the Milburn Creek case it should have been left to a court of justice to decide whether the claimants had or had not any valid right to compensation. Instead of that, the Government admitted off-hand that they had. But if, after making this admission, the amount had been left to court of justice to assess, it may well be understood that a searching public inquiry would have ended in a verdict for only a fraction of the award. Had the whole case been sent before a jury, the probabilities are that, instead of Sir John Robertson's imaginary £100,000, the claim would have been valued at what it was worth, and the cost of the trial would have fallen upon the claimants. On the other hand, if the Pyrmont land claims had been referred to arbitration, the results would almost to a certainty have involved a heavy loss to the public. Mr. Garnert's claim was for £20,000; the jury gave a verdict for £3750. Mr. Lucas's claim was for £76,000; the jury gave a verdict for £4500.

£76,000; the jury gave a verdict for £4600. In these two cases alone there was a saving of £82,750, or six-sevenths of the whole amount Had the claims been referred to arbitration they would assuredly have undergon less searching inquiry; it is possible that the right of frontage or access to the rail-way, which was strongly relied upon in both cases, would have been conceded; and it is probable that an award, reducing the 296,000 to £50,000 or £60,000, would, in the absence of such published evidence as helped to guide public opinion during the setal trials. have been welcomed as proof that the

During the same period the public debt been increased by £4,380,748 by the sale of ital has been expended in the purchase of railway other materials abroad, and in the payment of tick is nearly double the increase in the public debt the colony and double the total net surplus of sports for the same period. It stands to reason that labour employed in railway construction and other labour employed and the standard and clothed while so employed, and the standard in such works must receive its up of profit at the ordinary rate. The railway are becoming remucerative already, and no other form of industry could the same and of capital and labour have yielded so good suit to the colony. Between our surplus imports the increase of the public debt for the seven years influence is only £287,064, a sum insufficient to a mere insurance upon the trade at current rates, said it the said that the permanent way of a railway equires renewal every few years, the reply is obvious, hat renewals are a part of the ordinary expenses to be early provided for out of current revenue, and that traffic increasing so fast in this colony as to give additional alue to our railways, which could be sold already. It be public cared to self them, for probably half as such again as they have cost, with the certainty of a lill greater increase of value in the future. Taking heas loans into account, the balance of trade for these over years is almost even, as between this colony and

The actual increase of capital in lines opened for mile between the 1st of January, 1875, and the 31st of December, 1881, was £6,457,051, which exceeds the implies of imports for the period by £1,789,239, and a greater than the increase of the public debt by £2,703,933. The difference has been made good by serdrafts on the consolidated revenue, which have now seeme large enough to swallow up the entire processis our last three millions loan. But the works have see paid for by the colony in anticipation, as as soon as they are open they will egia to earn a rovenue aufficient, in all cobability, to pay this public creditor from the sty they are completed. At the end of 1874 the cleay had only 403 miles open for traffic, and at the end f 1881 the length had increased to 1076 miles, while or the present year the expenditors from loan funds as already reached £1,447,682, principally for rail ways already reached £1.447,082, principally for railways approaching completion. It is but natural that should tell upon our trade; but to what exit has done so cannot be ascertained until Commissioner for Customs issues his next report.

Here is an increase in half a year, and for the port of ions of imports and nearly a million and a half of appress, or 43 per cent. of one and 20 per cent. of the sther. The overland trade usually consists of about four times as large a value for exports as for imports, on account of the large quantity of wool sent to Landon by way of Adelaide and Melbourne; so that the balance of trade or the whole colony caunot be estimated until the overland returns are published, which has not seen done yet even for 1881. In 1830 our imports a werland reached $2,212,167, and our exports $4,610,878, which are nespectively $3 and 20 per cent. If our total imports and exports for the year. The execution of our railways inland ought to have miade ome difference in these proportions, and probably as: so that he increase-of trade overland can scarcely ave kept page with the increase seaward. In seven years the surplus of imports over exports for the United Kingdom was £852,242,284, a sum about equal to the entire National debt. If the doctrine were true, that a country is poorer by the excess of its imports over exports, England ought to have been ruined long ago, but instead of that she is wealthing than at any previous period of her history. Her shipping inwards and outwards has reached an annual total of fifty million tous, besides an equal tonnage for her own coasting trade. She is the general carrier for all the world; and the increase of her shipping, and of her railways, and other means of internal communication, the extension of her factories, the rebuilding of her cities and towns, and the investments of her cities and towns, and the investments of her capital in foreign loans, stocks, mines, and tion, the extension of her factories, the rebuilding of her cities and towns, and the investments of her capital in foreign loans, stocks, mines, and all forms of industrial enterprise represent the profits of her trade, without which she could not have fed her increasing population, nor maintained her place in the rank of the first-class powers of the world. Nine-tenths of her imports have been food for her people, and raw materials for her manufactures. The food sustained her operatives while working up these raw materials into fabrics worth two or three times their original cost, and she gave them back to her customers in payment of her debts, with the large margin of profits, which has made her the richest of nations. France is following her example; and for the six years given above had an excess of £109,924,400 in imports, taking home produce and home consumption alone. As for the United States, they are almost a community of nations in themselves, and their immense area of rich virgin soil can stand draining of food and raw materials to supply the wants of Europe for, perhaps, a century longer without feeling the approach of exhaustion; and before population begins to preasupon the resources of nature. They have checked importation by means of a high tariff; and consequently they have had to pay the whole Customs charges on such goods as they have imported, and a proportionately higher price on similar goods manufactured at home. Their immense natural wealth enables them to keep on this costly game; but for all that it has crippled their resources, and almost driven their fing from the high seas. An example like that should be a warsing to Australia not to handicap her equally rich natural resources with so mistaken a commercial policy. The world has need of increased produce, for two-thirds of its inhabitants are still only half clothed and haif fed, and the community which can best minister to the wants of others is the one which will and half fed, and the community which can less minister to the wants of others is the one which will itself advance the most rapidly in all the elements of

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In your leader this morning, on the recent inquiry on the supply of meat and bread to the above institution, allusion is drawn to the remark I made to the storakeeper.

"You need not mention you have been to me," and to his elatement before the committee, that he had not seen any director on the subject. I am not going for one moment to to defend the storakeeper testing an untruth, but to explain why I made that remark to him at the time.

On the evening of the 13th July, on my return home, I found West at my lonne. On expressing superior at secting him, he stated he came to me (having known him nearly 30 years) to complain of the conduct of the superintendent. In the course of conversation I found it srues from the quality of bread supplied the asylum. I inquired as to the quality of the meat also. He said it was most inferior, and came in pieces. I said there must be aximquiry, and told him to state what he had then informed me to a letter to the House Committee, which would meet the next day, and an inquiry should be held homediately, telling him if he could not substantiate his charge, I would move his instant dismissal; also, that he need not mention to anyone that he had seen me on the subject. Subsequent events have shown the wisdom of my suggestion.

At the close of the proceedings on the 13th instant I mentioned to Mr. Harris my regret at Wust having stated he had not seen a director, last of Canon Stephen the next day. I asbequently told West he would have to inform the committee he had seen me on the subject.

The riquiry was not held as to whether the meat supplied bad been had or attaking, but whether it was of the quality that we contracted for. The vidence of the cook and two sub-matrons clearly proved that the meat had been our morner in pieces (not in quarters or carrosae), there we as scarcely a sirkin or better joint, course and dry, &c., &c., whereas our contract is for meet of the best quality; and this had been as to the quality of food supplied. OLD AND NEW SYDNEY.

X .- THE OLD SUPREME COURT. There is no institution in the colony richer in in-resting reminiscences than the Supreme Court of New There is no institution in the colony richer in interesting reminiscences than the Supreme Court of New South Wales. For nearly 70 years it has played a most important part in the history of this young commusity, and, until about 30 years ago, it exercised very great influence as the superior legal tribunal in the southern hemisphere. With it have been associated the names of many of the best and biggestbrained men we have had in Australia; and its history would furnish materials for a peculiarly interesting volume, affording an insight into many phases of the political, legal, and social life of the first contury of this infant nation. Mr. John Gurner, whose death was amounced in Wednesday's Herald, was intimately associated with the old Court almost from its establishment, and his name recalls recollections of several of the most promisent men in the early days of the colony. From an esteemed correspondent, who writes with a lengthened knowledge of the legal institutions of old Sydney, we have received an interesting communication bearing the signature "M." in which some of these recollections are narrated. Our correspondent says:—

writes with a legislated two elogical to be plainted to be located as with collection and the state of the plainted as well called a public collection as a microscopic of the legislaturity. "At the other commentation between the legislature and the state of the plainted as the state of the

"There are still some old residents at Campbelltown who could tell how the ghost story originated, and the name of the person said to have seen the apparition of Fisher."

In a few years the old Courthouse will have to give place to a new building better suited to the require-ments of a largely increased population. At one time the building was a source of some pride on the part of the citizens, by whom it was regarded as a handsome and imposing structure. From an old and long-forgetten work we extract the following description of the old Courthouse, from which it will be seen that the original building has undergone considerable alterations : --

Courthouse, from which it will be seen that the original building has undergone considerable alterations:—

"This building, which is of handsome proportions, contains two courts for the administration of civil and criminal justice, which, if inferior to some, is greatly superior, both in size and convenience, to the majority of the assize courts in the cities and convenience, to the majority of the assize courts in the cities and country towns of Great Britain. Over the courts, to which you second by a good geometrical staircase, in a circular looby, surmounted by a neat done, are a hand-some suite of rooms, appropriated as offices to the Attorney and Solicitor Generals, the sheriffs, clerk of the courts, and registrar, and ether officials connected with the courts of law.

"This fine edifice—for which, as well as St. James's Church, from which it is separated only by a passage from King-street into Hyde Park, the colony is indebted to Governor Macquarie—was erected in 1820 by Mr. Greonaway, and, as a public building in a colony not then 33 years old, does infinite credit to all concerned in its erection. Still we are bound to add that, from some defects either of the architect or builders, but probably of both, and also from defects in the material (for the lime which is extracted from oyster-shells is seldom very strong, and always very sparingly used), the cour-house has latterly been found to be in a very perilous state, and, according to the report of our able Colonial Architect, Mr. M. W. Lewis, from survey, it is hardly in a state to edmit of repair. The fact appears to be that, for want of pillars and proper precautions in the use of bond timber, &c., the supersbundant weight of the offices has forced the walls to such a degree externally as that the law officers of the Crown may be expected to find themselves some fibs worning, with their tones of law and all their peraphernalia, on the floor of the Supresse Court, without being brought thitther by attachment, or by the more circuitous route of a spira to my a perpositionar descent by means of their own proper and specific gravity from the calling to the floor aforesaid.

"To avert such an exhibition and calamity, and finding that an effectual repair would be nearly equivalent to rebuilding the courts of law, his Excellency the Governor and Council decided on the immediate erection of a new court contiguous to the new goal, at Woolloomoloo, which is accordingly now in progress, from Mr. Lewis's design, and is the first specimen of really good and handsome manoury. Here it is intended that the criminal sessions shall be held as soon as the building is in a sufficient state of forwardness; and this arrangement, when the new goal is occupied, will obviste the lamentable exhibition of prisoners parading through the town to the courthouse for trial, and the risk of their escape. And the new court may be used for trying civil issues at nice prise, whilst the building in King-arreet undergoes repair, or until a new one can be completed, should this be taken down."

MUNICIPAL CONTRACTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—We see in this morning's paper a report of the proceedings of a meeting of the Municipal Council, in which statements are made highly injurious to our business.

We have successed, by public competition with other tradesmen, in obtaining municipal contracts, our tender being the lowest in every case.

If the aldermon who state that they heard a rumour that we had made a present of iron railing to a certain alderman had felt anxious to have served the public interest, they could have satisfied their minds as to the truth or otherwise of the rumour by requesting the Mayor to have sent for us.

The statements are absolutely untrue, and we give them an emphatic denial. We have had only one business transaction with Alderman Davies, for which the terms were not cash, payment for which we duly received.

Trusting that in justice to Mr. Davies and ourselves you will find space in your valuable paper for this letter, we have the benour to be, yours obediently,

In the Summons Court Horatio W. Complainant deposed that, about half-past 9 a. mof the 15th July, he saw defendant distributing a number of books called "The Magic Mirror," and he took a copy (produced); defendant said that he was employed by Dr. Bottrell to circulate the book; witness referred to portions which he considered to be, because obscene, unit for circulation. On erras-casmination by Mr. Roberts, the witness said that very likely such matters as those he complained of might be found in many medical works to be purchased at any booksoller's shop in Sydney. DEPUTATIONS.

TRAMWAY TO WAVERLEY AND BONDI.

TRAMWAY TO WAVERLEY AND BONDI.

A deputation, consisting of the Mayor of Waverley (Min Macpherson), Aldermen W. Wiley and J. Green; Mesera A. E. M'Kenzie, J. Thompson, and A. Alien; and Mr. W. Hesiet, M. L.A., waited upon the Hon. John Lackey, Minister for Works, yeasterley, tourge the secessity for duplicating the tramway to Waverley and running a branch tramway to Bondi. These additions to the tramway system were required to meet the wants of a large and increasing population, and there was overy prospect, the deputation stated, of the lines returning a very entispictory profit. It was pointed out, also, that passengers by the Waverley tramway who went beyond the Woollahrs branch line, wherever they might alight, were charged 4d., while passengers to the Woollahrs terminus were carried for 3d.

MR. LACKEY, in reply, said there could be no doubt that another line to Waverley would be of advantage both to the public and the Department, and the Department had to some extent endeavoured to carry out this improvement by taking a contract for doubling the line as far as St. Mathias Church. There was no doubt also that the abund of Bondi was a very important one, and that a tramway to Bondi was a very important one, and that a tramway to Bondi was a very important one, and that a tramway accommodation were being considered, and all the requirements of this kind could not be met at once. He could give no distinct promise as to when the lines asked for by the deputation could be carried out, but he would have the request duly considered. With reference to the anomaly in the charges upon the Waverley and Woollahrs lines, he would have the matter referred to the traffic department with a view to its being remedied.

TRAMWAY TO BURRAWANG.

TRAMWAY TO BURRAWANG.

TRAMWAY TO BURKAWANG.

A deputation, consisting of Messrs. Barrett, Hanrsham, Blencoe, Holborrow, and others, and accompanied by Hon. A. Campbell, M.L.C., Hon. J. Marks, M.L.C., Mr. Ridd, M.L.A., Dr. Tarram, M.L.A., Mr. Reid, M.L.A., Mr. Roseby, M.L.A., and Mr. Garrett, M.L.A., waited upon the Minister for Works, to request that a survey might be made at once for the purpose of choosing the best route for a tramway between Moss Vale and Burrawang. This tramway, it was urged, was necessary to meet the wants of a rich agricultural district peopled by at least a thousand farmers.

a tramway between Moss Vale and Burrawang. This tramway, it was urged, was necessary to meet the wants of a rich agricultural district peopled by at least a thoushold farmers.

Mr. LACKEY said the Government were fully impressed with the importance of the district, and no one was mora conscious than he was of its claims; and he was convinced that no line would pay better than the one proposed. But at the asset time the Government could not undertake this line without a vote of Parliament. The route for a line to Burrawang had been already roughly explored, and the report of the officer was by no means unfavourable; but it pointed out that it some places it would be necessary to deviate from the read. The cost of such deviations, he supposed, would not be much, and perhaps the owners of land through which the line want would give the land required in this way. But it was very likely that the Government would submit to Parliament a proposal for a system of railways even more suitable than the tramway system. He had had a conversation with Mr. Whitton with regard to extending our railway system, and it was very probable that the Government would ask Parliament to agree to a system of railways which, while nos departing from the present gradient, would be lighter and cheaper. Our present railway system was an admirable one, but, unfortunately, it became expensive and tedious in construction, whereas one of the great requirements of our country was expedition in carrying out the work of railway extension; and if we could initiate a system which would give us the advantages of the ordinary railways, and he more economical in cost, and more rapid in construction, it would be they beneficial. At all events it was a plan which was now engaging the attention of the Government, and he hoped they beneficial. At all events it was a plan which was now engaging the attention of the gradient would be the same the rails would be lighter, the lails were done, and these light railways would be absolutely the system of these light REMEDIES FOR THE IRISH DISCONTENT.—The New York Times, in an article on "Pacifying Ireland," maintains that there is only one way in which Irishmen can be pacified. They must be given whatever they want. Anybody, even the most violent child, can be pacified in this way, and there is really no other way in which pacification is possible. How can a child who wants the moon be expected to be happy and contented without it? and why should we suppose that Irishmen can be made contented by giving them prisons, which they do not want, and refusing them everything they do want? It is strange that no Minister except Mr. Oladstone has ever discovered how to pacify Ireland when the way has always been so obvious to the meanest intellect. However, we cannot be too thank-ful that at least the pacification of Ireland is close at hand. The first thing to be done to satisfy the Irishmen is to abolish the louthsome system of paying ront. The Land Bill, which promised to reduce rents every largely, did not satisfy Ireland, because it did not totally abolish read paying. It will be in vain for any one to expect that Irish tenants will be satisfied so long as they have to pay rent, no matter how small the aracunt may be that each tenant has to pay. The land of Ireland must belong to the iteration and not to the landlerds, and the first step towards pacification must be the carrying out of this great reform. Then the taxes which the unfeeling Saxon has imposed must be taken off. At present the tax on whisky alone is sufficient to prevent any Irishman of the poorer classes from pacifying himselia at his own exponse. Freedom of distilling must be given to the downtrodden people of Irisland, if Mr. Gladstone and Protestants of the North of Irishme must be expected for the benefit of true Irishmen. To imagine that any Irishman with any self-respect will be pacified so long as there is an English Victory in the Castle, would be worse than folty. So soon as the British concerned. THE SEASON OF 1882.

In again addressing the Woolgrowers of the colonies, we would sail attention te the very large quantity of Wool which was sold in this market during the post season. In our last vear's Circular, prior to the opening of the season, we pointed out that there would be a heavy increase in the quantity which would be sold in the colonies, and that good prices would role, and the result justified our expectations. We are also certain that if producers would compare the prices realized in the colonies with the home prices, the balance will prove to be much in favour of the IACAL MARK F.FS.

We again confidently predict an affect demand during the crossing season, not slone from local but ere, but force, hurser from Kagland, America, and the Uniterest demand during the crossing season, not slone from local but ere, but force, hursers from Kagland, America, and the Uniterest demand during the commany. (BY OUR SPECIAL REPORTER.) II .- THE WARANGESDA MISSION. The commissioners, who left Sydney on the evening of Saturday, July 1, arrived at Darlington Point rail-inspection having now been completed, the commissioners took their departure; but, before they left, the aborigines indulged in three cheers, which, if feeble, were well meant. The river was recrossed in a pust, skilfully piloted by two of the blacks, and Mr. M'Gaw's homested was reached shortly before dusk.

DAY, JULY 22, 1882.

The state of the state VIII.

Being anxious to get further inland, we only stayed a few days in Laroot, and then made a fresh start for Quella Kangsa, on the bank of the Perak River. Captain Walker, the superintendent of police, having handly taken the trouble of arranging our conveyance, we had two gharries sent on in advance to take us the second stage. We got through in one day, having sent on our luggage with the two servants the night before in a bullock cart. It was very pleasant travelling, as each of us having a separate pharrie, we had room to keep cool and look about us. We were accompanied part of the way by a friend who took us to see a grantise quarry where stone for the roads was being quarried by coolies, each of them working with single-handed drill; and their employer expressed himself as satisfied with the way they were taking to work in hard rock—a thing entirely new to them. Mr. Caulfield, the gentleman who was working the quarry, proved very hospitable, and pressed us to lunch, which was too good a thing to be declined, and then we moved on again to the Gap, where we had to walk some two miles, which we found pretty warm work. From the other side of the Gap there is a splendid bit of scenery; a high limestone rock, for it can hardly be called a mountain, stands out of the plain like some gigantic ruin of bygone ages. It must be some 600 to 800 feet in height, and on the western side, which is first seen, it shows a perpendicular well from the top to the bottom. But what gives the charm of beauty to it is the variety of colour it exhibits, being in places very shade of green that tropical foliage can produce is clustered round its base. With no worse mishap than being tipped up a couple of times throogtch the harms breaking.

A FEW WEEKS WITH THE MALAYS, walk two on each side, and spin the boat along at a very good pace. At noon we stopped at the mouth of a creek, called Sungir Tumong, to cook dinner, and while this was being done I strolled up to a village a little this was being done I strolled up to a village a little

THE ENGLISH ECLIPSE EXPEDITION.

The eclipse is over, and the members of the different missions have arrived at Cairc on their return home. They all seem satisfied with the result of their work, and it is probable that when their observations are properly discussed and reduced it will appear that this eclipse, although the abouts on record since the time that the value of eclipses has been properly recognized, has given as a great a harvest of fresh and incut during a much longer duration of totality. It is in the first place due to the great and valuable help which the different expeditions have received from the Egyptian Government that the preparations at the critical moment were complete, and their such uniformly good results could be obtained. It is a fact which certainly seems worth noticing that at a time when disquieting rumours filled the air, when Europeans left Cairo almost in a panie, when the Enghels and French feets were ordered to proceed to Alexandria, and when mobily hnow what changes in the internal government of the next day might bring, a at work on the bunks of the NMs, mixing freely with the native population, sided to the utsuest of their power by overybody concerned, and personally assisted by high officials, who disclarged the duties utrusted to them by the K hedive undisclared to the other power by overybody concerned, and personally assisted by high officials, who disclared the process of the NMs, mixing freely with the native population, sided to the utsuest of their power by overybody concerned, and personally assisted by high officials, who disclared the complex of the process of the NMs mixing freely with the native population, which we have been supported in the changes which threatened the Egyptian Government, and which he do do the work have been supported in the changes which threatened the Egyptian Government, before the political agistation, and apparently uninterested in the changes which threatened to the support of the NMs of t observations fitted into each other with almost unexpected nicety.

It is difficult to give a description of the celipso itself, and averybody who has had the good fortune to witness one will find that no description which he has read had in any way prepared him for the strange and exciting spectacle. It is indeed only whon two or three eclipses have been witnessed that the phenomenon becomes sufficiently familiar to be completely enjoyed. Its distressing affect on animals has been often noticed, and it has always been found advisable to take strong measures for avoiding the intrusion of the easily excited population into the scientific observatories. Thanks to the riforts of Colonel Mokins Bey, sided by the local military authorities, soldiers were posted at intervals above the camp to prevent any one who was not actually engaged in scientific work from approaching the observatories, and the cries which were heard during and immediately before totality proceeded from a crowd of spectators at a very respectable and safe distance.

The first contact took place a little over an hour before which were heard during and immediately before bothly proceeded from a crowd of speciators at a very respectable and safe distance.

The first contact took rhose a little over an hour before totality, and as the moon processing the process of the second of the processing the second of the processing the second of the second of the second of the moon, the standard second of the moon, the surface of the moon, but a brilliant spark still showed that totality had not arrived, and that the last ray of the sun still found its way into our atmosphere. The spark is reduced in size; it has disappeared. The signal is given. The critical 70 seconds have arrived, during which every one is to do his work silently and steadily. There are moments, however, during which it requires a strong effort of the will to remain silent, and the remains a large brilliant comet was unexpectedly seen close to the sun, remarks were interchanged, and words passed which were not on the programme. Luckily, however, no scrious disturbance took place, the totality was fully as long as was expected, and when the first ray of the sun had forced its way again quer the edge of the retreating mon, all observers who could finnediately judge of their results approached cannot be easily given at present. The observants has propared and cannot be easily given at present. The observants have been brished cannot be easily given at present.

the photographic results were known, but they also proved satisfactory.

An approximate idea of the results which have been obtained cannot be easily given at present. The observations wan reducing, comparing, discussing, and whatever is said at present may be subject to alteration or correction, but enough is known to show that all the trouble taken by but esough is known to show that all the trouble taken by the astronomers has not been wasted, and that all the kindness and bospitality shown by the Egyptians in the interests of science have been well rewarded. The French party consisted of Messra. Trépied, Tholton, Puiseux. A great part of their work was done during the partial phase of the celipse; the edge of the moon was carefully examined by them with two identical spectroscopes constructed by M. Thollon which units great dispersion with spood definition. Messra. Trépied and Thollon express themselves with commendable caution as to their results, but there seems no doubt as to certain facts, and the only suplantation which has at present occurred to them is the existence of the much discussed, often doubted, some-times almost disproved, but always suspected, lunar atmosphere.
